

Airhead!

The diary of an incompetent air-con apprentice...

MONDAY

OMG! The recession's caught up with Al-Cool and Max said he's reducing my pay!

"But you can't! As an apprentice I'm already on minimum wage", I protested.

"So you'll work longer hours instead! From now on you start at 8:30 instead of 9:00am."

"But that's soooo unfair – you don't start that early"

"And you'll finish at 6 not 5pm"

"Oh, come on - !"

"Take it or leave it."

I had to accept - what else could I do? Anyway, if I arrive just before he does and leave as soon as he's gone, he'll never know the difference... And it could be worse - at least it's not Saturdays too...

TUESDAY

Mum's friends, the ladies-who-lunch, have been raising money for charity. They pledged to donate what they usually spend in a month on nail treatments, tanning studios, massage, skin-care and liposuction... and raised enough to buy air-conditioning for an entire school. But there was a bit of a misunderstanding. Some ladies thought they were raising money for hair conditioning and want their money back. Too late - the money's been spent. One lady was so traumatised to have sacrificed her beauty treatments, she's needed counselling from a beauty psycho-therapist...

WEDNESDAY

I don't believe it! Mum's friends got Penguin to install the air-con. "But mum, why not Al-Cool?"
"Dah-ling, mummy's friends need a proper company to do it... Max doesn't have a very nice image, now does he? Besides, Penguin have agreed to do it on a Saturday when the school's closed."

"But mum, I work for Al-Cool... I mean, you're own son... How could you?"

"I know, darling, and I'm sorry but that's mummy's final word – now I must dash off to lunch with the girls - byeeee!"

THURSDAY

Told Max what mum said. He went outside and sat in his van. I heard a muffled shout: "Aaaagh! Bloody Penguin!!", then he came back and said: "Listen... I've been thinking about those longer hours I want you to do..."
"You've changed your mind?"
"You must be joking! You're gonna work Saturday mornings too!"

Don't get an airhead, get an expert!
